ERA promotes its ongoing work on aviation safety

- As part of its ongoing work on aviation safety, the European Regions Airline Association's (ERA)* Air Safety Group publishes safety advice for pilots and operators through its Safety Targeted Awareness Reports (STARs).
- ERA has published a promotional document explaining the background and use of its STARs, which provides detailed information on the reports, who should use them and the safety topics they cover.

Ensuring the highest levels of safety for its members and the wider industry remains one of ERA's main priorities and the publication of these STARs is a key part of ERA's work in this area. Produced by ERA's Air Safety Group, the STARs cover a range of topics, including ground and in-flight operations, crew procedures, weather and security.

There are currently over 20 published STARs, with an additional two due to be published by the end of the year. Members (and the wider industry) can view, download and print the reports directly from ERA's website:

The STARs guidance document is also available to view and download on ERA's website on the following page: www.eraa.org/publications/otherpublications

* Founded in 1980, ERA is a non-profit trade association representing 52 airlines and 140 companies involved in European air transport and is the only association representing the entire spectrum of companies involved in European aviation. The association promotes the interests of European airlines by lobbying the European Commission and other European regulatory bodies on policy matters, promoting the social and economic importance of air transport and its environmental commitments.
